At nearly 5,000 meters (16,404 feet), Tilicho Lake claims its spot as the highest lake in the world, merging mythic allure with breathtaking reality. The journey takes you through dramatic, rugged terrain, featuring high-altitude passes like Mesokanto La at 5,330 meters (17,486 feet), where you'll experience nature's grandeur at its most extreme.

One of the trek's most thrilling highlights is crossing the frozen lake or tackling challenging watersheds soaring above 5,000 meters. Despite no longer being restricted, Tilicho Lake's remote isolation and soaring heights make it a rare gem for the bold adventurer. Prepare to be awed by crystal-clear waters, vibrant wildflowers, and towering peaks, as you embark on a journey that promises to be as unforgettable as it is adventurous.

The Tilicho Lake trek with Mesokanto pass Trek is among one of the beautiful high pass treks in Nepal, which can be done during the monsoons, because this zone falls in the rain shadow areas of Nepal. This is a more severe odyssey that requires several nights of camping. Blessed with astounding diversity, the trails cut across the famous Annapurna Circuit path and the journey goes below a whole assembly of massive peaks known as the 'Great Barrier'- the true soul of the Annapurnas. Nerve tingling negotiations across unstable scree slopes and crossing a sharp glaciated pass make this venture one of the most daring and challenging treks in the world...but then this is what 'Tilicho Lake and Mesokanto Pass trek' is all about...your holiday of purpose...and a sense of achievement.

Plan this venture with 'Mountain Sherpa Trekking', and you'd feel more comfortable and safe in your journey of discovering the unknown from the known...
